

Aquamarine and Diamond Ring in Platinum | English c.1950s POA

A beautifully made ring from the 1950s, made in England, set with a 2.5 carat emerald-cut aquamarine in platinum.

The stone is a clear, pale blue - light-catching and quietly luminous - held in a fine platinum setting with delicate millegrain edges and a softly pierced gallery beneath.

Each shoulder is set with small antique-cut diamonds, just enough to frame the central stone without distraction.

The balance is classic: crisp but never stark, full of light but never loud.

Marked 'PLAT' inside the band, the ring reflects the refined craftsmanship of post-war Britain - a time when design moved toward clarity, subtle proportion, and timeless elegance.

This is a ring that sits comfortably on the hand. Its presence is gentle but unmistakable - suited to those who favour subtle colour and thoughtful detail.

It wears beautifully on its own or alongside a slim wedding band, and would be as at home with a cashmere sweater as it would with evening silk.

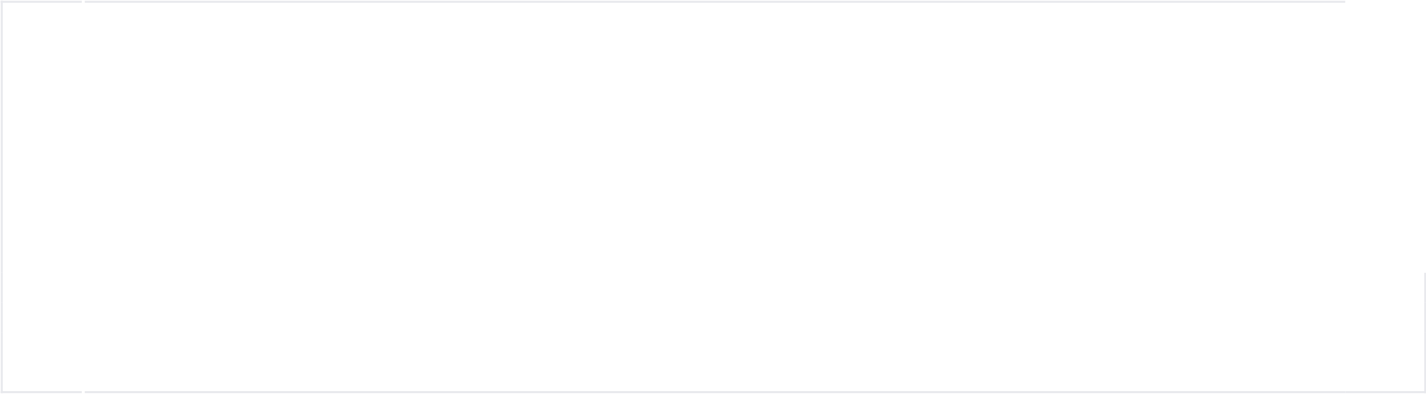

Currently size N½, and can be resized if needed.

Available exclusively at ELTONS, Grays Antique Market, Mayfair, London.
