

Textured 18ct Gold Brooch by Andrew Grima | Diamond Accent | English
c.1970
POA

A bold and sculptural brooch by Andrew Grima, one of Britain's most visionary 20th century jewellers.

Made in 18ct gold, the brooch is formed as a staggered lozenge of openwork batons - textured, angular, and architectural in style.

Three single-cut diamonds are set asymmetrically along one side, providing a subtle contrast to the texture of the gold.

The composition is deliberate: modern, minimal, and deeply tactile.

Stamped 'GRIMA' and '750', the piece reflects Grima's signature approach, merging abstract form with precious materials to create wearable sculpture.

Though compact in size, it has presence far beyond its dimensions.

Made in England, circa 1970.

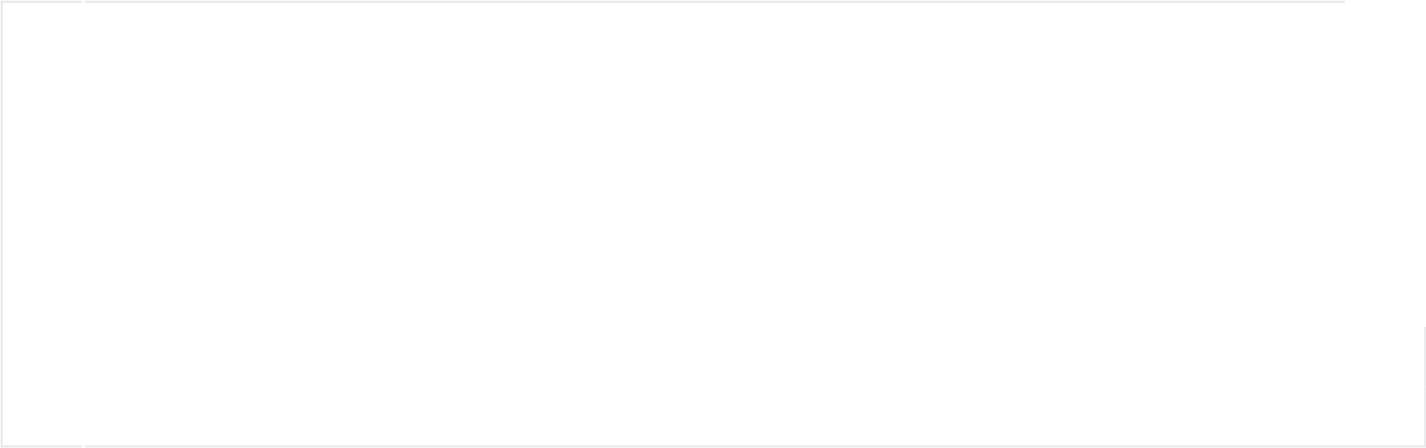

Dimensions: 3.5cm x 1.5cm
