Omega Dynamic 166.039 – Automatic – 41mm – 1970s Icon

If ever a watch screamed 1970s, it's the Omega Dynamic reference 166.039. Bold, unconventional and effortlessly cool, the Dynamic remains one of Omega's most distinctive designs and a true representation of the era's experimental styling.

This striking example features the signature elliptical stainless steel case, designed to sit naturally on the wrist, and remains in good honest condition for a watch that is now over 50 years old.

Our View

The Dynamic was unlike anything else Omega produced at the time. The elliptical case shape was developed following ergonomic studies to improve wrist comfort, resulting in one of the most recognisable designs of the decade.

Today, the Dynamic has developed a strong following amongst collectors who appreciate its bold styling and unmistakable 1970s identity. The combination of the black dial, bright blue seconds hand and original bracelet makes this example particularly appealing.

A great fun watch, unlikely you'll see another on someone's wrist, and equally suited to daily wear or adding something genuinely different to a collection.
