

Edwardian Graduated Opal Bead Necklace - Saddingtons Jewellery
Stand 375
£2,950.00

A beautiful Edwardian graduated opal bead necklace, showcasing a wonderful strand of natural opals displaying truly exceptional play of colour. Flashes of vivid red, green, orange and blue dance across each bead, creating a captivating display that changes beautifully as the necklace catches the light. The necklace is composed of smoothly polished graduated opal beads, each separated by faceted rock crystal rondelle spacers which add subtle sparkle while enhancing the brilliance of the opals. This refined combination was a popular design during the Edwardian era. Measuring 17.25 inches in length, the necklace sits gracefully at the neckline and fastens with its original 9ct white gold barrel snap clasp. The graduation of the beads creates a balanced and flattering profile, making it equally suited to everyday elegance or special occasions. Opals were among the most sought-after gemstones of the Edwardian period, admired for their ever-changing colours and ethereal beauty. Finding a matching strand with such vibrant and consistent play of colour is becoming increasingly difficult, making this a particularly desirable example.
