A Vacheron & Constantin with a compelling military provenance.

Our present Vacheron & Constantin U.S. Army Corps of Engineers pocket watch is a rare and historically significant timepiece, commissioned during the First World War for use by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

Vacheron & Constantin delivered 3,289 watches to the Corps between 1918 and 1920, with the majority being single-button chronographs.

Its 52mm case houses a white enamel dial with large, highly legible Western Arabic numerals, luminous hands and an outer chronograph scale, features designed for practical use in the field.

Inside beats a Vacheron & Constantin signed manual winding movement.
