Omega Seamaster DeVille 165.008 Automatic Linen Dial 1971 – Original Papers

Omega Seamaster DeVille 165.008 – A superbly original example of one of Omega's most elegant vintage references, presented with its original papers, original black leather strap and original Omega steel buckle. Having had just one previous owner, purchased directly from the name featured on the paperwork, this watch offers a level of provenance and originality that is increasingly difficult to find.

What truly sets this example apart is its rare silver linen dial. Far less common than standard dials found on the reference, the textured finish adds character and individuality while perfectly complementing the understated design of the Seamaster DeVille. The serial number dates production to 1965, while the original paperwork records its first retail sale in August 1971.

Our View

Yes, this example sits at the upper end of the market for a Seamaster DeVille 165.008, but there are compelling reasons why. Watches are only original once, and finding an example with a single-owner
