

Pair of Chinese verte-imari 'Governor Duff' plates, Yongzheng, circa 1725-30

£3,500.00

Pair of Chinese verte-imari 'Governor Duff' plates, Yongzheng, circa 1725-30, decorated in the centre with a Dutchman and his wife strolling in a fenced garden under a maple tree, accompanied by their dog, the wide border with floral sprays and items from the hundred antiques; diameter: 9 1/16 in. (23 cm.), 2 minute chips to reverse of one plate. This design is known as Diederik Durven, the Governor General of the Dutch East India Company (VOC) between 1729-31, and his wife, although the print source has not yet been discovered and the couple has also been identified as Louis XIV and Mme de Montespan; however, their raiment is more indicative of a Dutch subject. There is a similar example in the Rijksmuseum, illustrated in D.F. Lunsingh Scheurleer, 'Chinese Export Porcelain', London, p. 137, fig. 203; for a similar example see D.S. Howard, 'The Choice of the Private Trader', p. 62, pl 37 and William Sargent, 'Treasures of Chinese Export Ceramics', p. 193, no. 91.
