

Buckle Bracelet in 18ct Gold | Blue Enamel with Pearl & Diamond Cluster | Swedish c.1850s POA

A striking buckle bracelet in 18ct gold, made in Sweden in the 1850s.

Rich blue enamel frames the engraved gold surface, with a natural pearl and diamond cluster at its centre, a soft contrast to the structured, architectural form.

The buckle motif was a powerful symbol of the era, representing loyalty, protection, and lasting attachment.

Here, it's not just symbolic, it's sculptural, designed with presence and precision.

Though made over 170 years ago, the bracelet feels surprisingly modern, bold and detailed.

Worn on its own, it holds the wrist with confidence.

Paired with a simple black dress, a white shirt, or a rolled blazer sleeve, it brings instant substance and story, a serious piece with romantic depth.

Beautifully made, beautifully kept, and still entirely chic today.

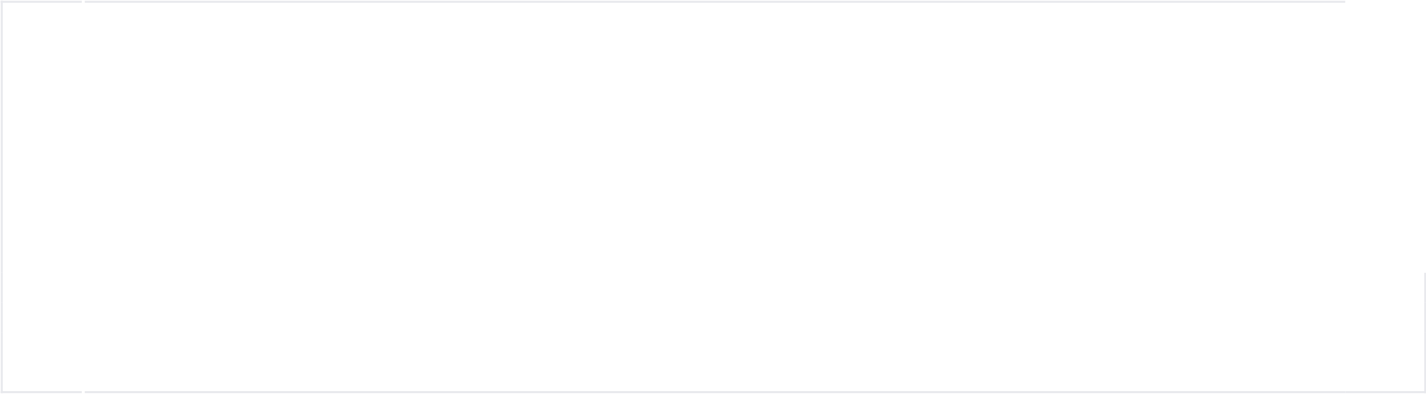

18cm long
