

Opal & Diamond Drop Earrings | 15ct Gold | English c.1930s POA

These stunning 1930s drop earrings, crafted in 15ct gold, capture the quiet sophistication and romance of the era.

Measuring approximately 4cm in length, the earrings feature luminous opals at their centre, which gently shift in colour with the light, creating a captivating play of pastel hues.

Surrounding the opals are delicate diamonds, carefully set to add just the right amount of sparkle without detracting from the ethereal quality of the opals.

Made in England during the early 20th century, these earrings reflect the grace and elegance that characterised the 1930s.

The combination of opals and diamonds was a nod to both softness and brilliance, a style that was loved by women who sought beauty with an understated yet luxurious presence.

These earrings would have been worn by a woman with an eye for timeless elegance and romantic details.

Likely worn to evening soirées, intimate dinners, or garden parties, they would have complemented a delicate gown or evening dress perfectly.

Today, they continue to exude a fresh air of romance and sophistication, offering a graceful accessory for any occasion.

With their enduring beauty, they are a perfect choice for those seeking an heirloom-quality piece that speaks to both the past and the present.
