

Late Georgian / Early Victorian Topaz & Pearl Brooch | 15ct Gold | c.1835 POA

A luminous and finely crafted brooch from the transitional period between Georgian elegance and early Victorian sentiment.

Set in 15ct gold, it features a vibrant canary yellow topaz of approximately 3 carats, foil-backed to enhance its brilliance, and encircled by a halo of natural seed pearls with fine coiled gold detailing - hallmarks of late Georgian design.

Compact in size (2.3cm x 1.5cm) yet full of character, this brooch was originally worn at the throat or pinned to a ribbon, catching candlelight at evening gatherings.

Today, its understated beauty makes it remarkably easy to wear: on a fine cashmere jumper, the lapel of a tailored jacket, or the band of a wool hat for a quietly luxurious accent.

It's a piece that feels effortlessly unisex in its elegance.

A rare survivor from c.1835, wearable, collectable, and full of timeless charm.
